NAPANEE FLATTERED

BY PRAISE FROM PROF. DALL, OF QUEEN'S.

Who Preached at the Presbyterian Church Re-opening.

On Sunday, November 23rd, Rev. Prof. John Dall, of Kingston, preached the re-opening sermons in St. Andrew's Church. Very large congregations were present. In the evening many were unable to obtain entrance. During five months the church was under repairs and enlargement. Referring to this, Prof. Dall said that he had seldom been in a church in Canada that was more tastefully decorated, and where all was so harmonious, as in St. Andrew's. He congratulated the session, congregation and minister for the expression of their deep interest in religious things, and expressed hope, which even graduated into an appeal that none would be satisfied alone with the maturity of the house, but would ever have a building going on "eternal in heart."

The sermons were refreshing and their spiritual ozone came in quality and quantity.

And the effectiveness of two very forceful sermons was enhanced by the excellency of the music for the day. St. Andrew's choir appeared for the first time in gowns. But one forgot the ornateness of things when the choir sang the anthem, "Lord Thy Glory fills the Heavens." The organist, Miss P. Nesbitt, was at her best, and Mrs. Howard, wife of the pastor, ably and most suitably led the choir for this day of dedication.

Prof. Dall preached in the morning from John 3:8: "The wind bloweth where it listeth, but thou canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the spirit." This text was suggested by the casual conversation of some of the men of the congregation who were discussing how such new life had come to St. Andrew's and one made reply, "it is of the spirit, and therefore cannot be described." Dr. Dall made no fantastic interpretation of the text. He told the plain historic setting and then set it to show that men must not discount the working of the spirit, which may come as the wind, and from as many quarters. But the same spirit was ever present, Christ said "Ye must be born again." And there has been no change made—we must come up to the new issues of the day without the old prejudices, and therefore become possessed of a new spirit. Christ was the new issue for Nicodemus and for those whom he represented. Perhaps this was a new birth for St. Andrew's.

In the evening the sermon was from John 13:17 and John 14:15: "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them," and "if ye love me, keep my commandments." It was fitting that a very practical sermon on such texts should follow the enlightening and chaste sermon of the morning. Professor Dall said that complete Christianity consisted not only of

NAPANEE VS. BELLEVILLE

NAPANEE WINS, 10-6.

The first rugby match ever in Napanee was played on Saturday afternoon at the Driving Park between Napanee Collegiate and Albert College of Belleville resulted in a victory for the Napanee boys by 10-6. The N. C. I. are congratulated on their good show in this new departure of the game they have had things their own way in association football, having club Deseronto, Picton, Albert College, Belleville High School and they even with Belleville Deaf and Students.

Napanee were by far the better team, but what they lacked in velocity they more than made up in their tackling was far superior to that of Belleville's and it was a pleasure to see "Little Jack" Soby get twice his size.

Belleville were first to score and end run on N. C. I.'s ten yard line resulted in an easy touch down for visitors. The ball was carried only behind the bars but was not verted.

Napanee carried the ball down field by bucks and end runs to Belleville's ten yard line and on the end down, Grange ran around the end was downed for a touch-down.

Both teams were unable to get the ball five yards from opponents line but were unable to buck over.

In the third quarter Belleville carried the ball to Napanee's line and third down kicked. Vrooman fumbled behind the line and Grange recovered and was tackled before he could and Belleville scored a rouge, Belleville 6, N. C. I., 5.

On the kick off from quarter Grange and Wilson made a beautiful combination run down the field and the ball was downed at centre. Napanee kicked and fast following up by Vrooman wings, secured the ball fumble by Belleville's half back the first down N. C. I. made yards and a touch looked sure. Kay was bucked over the line was shoved back again. On the down Wilson secured the ball to his line and hurdling over p scored a touch-down. Grange to convert.—10-6.

In the final quarter Belleville carried the ball up the field, owing to Vrooman's wing line being off side. Belleville College gained about thirty yards the N. C. I.'s eagerness to get the Vrooman and Wilson relieved by end runs and the game ended final score being 10-6 in favor of Napanee.

For the visitors the wing men good and held the N. C. I. line actively but Napanee excelled in field play. The backs got away and were hard to grasp. Grange Wilson played good games as Vrooman. McKay, Perry and Herrington played good games for their men low and hard.

for Nicodemus and for those whom he represented. Perhaps this was a new birth for St. Andrew's.

In the evening the sermon was from John 13: 17 and John 14: 15 "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them," and "if ye love me, keep my commandments." It was fitting that a very practical sermon on such texts should follow the enlightening and chaste sermon of the morning. Professor Dall said that complete Christianity consisted not only of belief and feeling, but has also the element of will and morals. The moral aspect is often neglected or even repudiated. Men say they are Christians, but how do we know? Man's actions are the informants to our fellows. When Jesus healed the paralytic He told him that his sins were forgiven, but He did more, He healed his body. The Jews had an article in their theology that, until a man was absolved of his sin, he could not be healed of his sickness. If Jesus had only healed the heart, the Jews would not have believed. They could not however, disbelieve their eyes that saw the paralytic walk. The motor expression the world wants for means of judgment. Hence our lives must not be dynamicless.

To keep the commandments Jesus impressed the need of love. He added the eleventh commandment because the Old Testament ten, did not seem to fit all modern cases. Prof. Dall said that in such cases common sense was to be used,—but a common sense that arose from the abiding principle of love for our fellowmen. But even altruism is not sufficient for a perfect Christian life. There must be a complete surrender to the Holy Spirit. We are moved from above, unless we throw ourselves out of relationship. And to be in relationship is to be moved by the Spirit of God.

Rev. J. P. Wilson, B. A., of Grace Methodist, was present in the morning. Rev. S. Sellery, M. A., B. D., of Trinity Methodist, was present in the evening—each assisting Prof. Dall and the pastor, Dr. Howard.

On Monday evening the congregation had a re-union and reception. A large number enjoyed the evening in songs and conversation and in refreshments. But best of all there was manifested a warm welcome to strangers and a hearty fellowship in the re-union of members and adherents. Dr. and Mrs. Howard received the company. Miss Hazel Roblin, Miss Pearl Nesbitt and Mrs. Howard sang, and Miss Preston rendered several excellent selections on the piano.

The building committee and re-union committee are both to be praised for the success of the material and social improvements.

NANEE VS. BELLEVILLE

NANANEE WINS, 10--6.

First rugby match ever played between Nananee and Belleville was played on Saturday afternoon at the Driving Park between Nananee Collegiate Institute and Belleville College of Belleville and won in a victory for the Nananees 10-6. The N. C. I. are to be congratulated on their good showing in their new departure of the game as they have had things their own way in football, having cleaned up the Pictou, Albert College, the High School and they broke up the Belleville Deaf and Dumb team.

Nananees were by far the lighter on their feet than the Belleville players who were more than made up in speed. Nananee's back was far superior to Belleville's and it was a treat to see "Little Jack" Soby get men in size.

Belleville were first to score. An 11 yard N. C. I. ten yard line run and an easy touch down for the Nananees. The ball was carried directly to the bars but was not counted.

Nananees carried the ball down the field and end runs to Belleville yard line and on the second Grange ran around the end and scored for a touch-down.—5-5.

Belleville were unable to break and on one occasion N. C. I. carried the ball five yards from their line but were unable to score. Belleville carried to Nananee's line and on a run kicked. Vrooman fumbled the line and Grange recovered and tackled before he could clear the line. Belleville scored a rouge.—Belleville 5, N. C. I. 5.

A kick off from quarter Grange made a beautiful combination down the field and the latter owned at centre. Nananee and fast following up by Nananees, secured the ball on a run by Belleville's half back. On a touch down N. C. I. made their end a touch looked sure. McEas bucked over the line but was tackled again. On the last Nananee secured the ball behind the line and huddling over players and a touchdown. Grange failed to score.—10-6.

A final quarter Belleville worked all up the field, owing to N. C. I. line being off side. Albert gained about thirty yards by his eagerness to get the man in and Wilson relieved nicely runs and the game ended, the score being 10-6 in favor of the Nananees.

The visitors the wing men were held the N. C. I. line effect. Nananee excelled in back play. The backs got away faster than the grass. Grange and played good games as did the McKays. Perry and Sykes played good games getting in low and hard.

contracting parties were the youngest daughter of Mrs. Edward Gaulin, Miss Millie Gaulin, and Joseph Roach, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Roach.
The bride wore her travelling tailored suit of navy blue and purple velvet hat with plums, and carried a bouquet of roses. She entered the church with her brother, James Gaulin, postmaster, and her sister, Miss Mary Gaulin, who wore a tweed mixed suit of brown and black velvet hat with brown plumes
and carried carnations, as bridesmaid.
The groom was assisted by his brother Edward Roach. Miss Mary St. Louis

mass, immediate relatives returned to the home of the bride's mother,
where the wedding breakfast was

The admiral was assured a few days ago by Gen. Aguilar, chief of the revolutionists, that there would be no interference with American or other foreign affairs.

SHOULD FIX UP HARBOR

Marine Men Say Goderich Needs Extensive Improvements.

Testimony Given at Inquest Into the Death of Lake Victims Is to the Effect That Town Could Be Made a Port of Refuge if Several Alterations Were Made—Storm Sign Disregarded.

GODERICH, Nov. 25.—That improvements for the proper equipment of Goderich harbor should include a modern foghorn suitably placed, a well-rigged lifeboat station and adequate lights, and that the basin should be dredged out to a greater area were the facts elicited from Capt. W. O. Whitney of Ashtabula O., who is here in the interests of the Lake Carriers' Association, in his examination by Crown Attorney Seager at the evening session of the wreck inquiry.

Captain Whitney estimated the property loss in the great storm as amounting to $2,500,000, and the lives lost as 175.

The witness believed that the harbor of Goderich could be made a good harbor of refuge, capable of accommodating any vessel. As to storm signals, he said that these were observed by master to some extent, but they were in the habit of leaving port in the face of the signals and taking chances of dodging the storm. The barometer should have afforded a warning of the storm of the 9th inst., but sometimes, it was said, a captain would hang his hat over the barometer so he could not see it. The witness had no theory as to the causes of the loss of so many vessels, except that the storm was an extraordinarily severe one. The steamer McGean, with which he was acquainted, had a first-class equipment, and her life preservers that had come ashore were in good condition.

Captain Malcolm C. Cameron of the passenger steamer Huron, and Captain Hartman endorsed the views of the previous witness as to the improvement of Goderich harbor.

Another adjournment was made Monday, Dec. 1. This is expected to be the final session of the inquest.

Captain Bassett, of Collingwood, managing director of the company owning the ill-fated Wexford and other vessels, recalled, was first examined by Crown Attorney Seager, and was reminded of his statement on Friday regarding Goderich harbor. Witness said that what he meant was that the harbor improvements were being made piecemeal. The Government was taking ten years to do what could and should be done in one year. It simply meant putting more men at work on the job. If the harbor midway through the second act,

Mad Eye Co. refused to go on

ESCAPED BY SHEETS.

Insane Woman Fractured Her Arm In Fall From Window.

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—By clambering hand-over-hand down an improv-vised ladder, made of five knitted bed sheets, 35 feet in length, Mrs. Goodwin, an inmate of the Hospital for the Insane on West Queen street, made her escape early yesterday morning,
and was free for several hours.

With the ends of the sheets knotted
to a bar in the window the woman
swung into space and commenced her perilous descent. When within ten feet of the ground, the window screen to which her ladder was attached gave way and she fell to the ground, fracturing her right arm.

Undaunted by the agony caused by her injury, the insane woman made her escape over the brick wall surrounding the grounds and was picked up hours afterwards by a police constable, wandering on West Queen street, nursing her broken arm, and in a very weak condition.

Needed Brutality.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—On the strength of a written confession that she had taken up with an illiterate
horse-trainer, because "she needed brutality to make her happy, Charles Dwight Folsom, a well-known lawyer, was granted an interlocutory degree of divorce from his wife in the Supreme Court here yesterday. Mrs.
Folsom, her mind and body shattered
from the "brutality" of A. G. Williams, a Nevada horse-breeder and trainer, was last heard of in a hospital in Chico, Cal., deserted and pen-iless. Since then she has wandered away.

Radio Phone Promoters on Trial.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—A jury was selected in the Federal Court yesterday to try James Dunlap Smith, Leo de Forest, Elmer E. Burlingame and Samuel E. Darby, former officers, directors and agents of the Radio Telephone Co. of New Jersey, on the charge of using the mails to defraud
investors in the stock of the wireless telephone company. The trial was put over until Wednesday, when the first of the witnesses summoned from all parts of the country will be examined.

Booth Brothers Meet.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—After an estrangement of seventeen years
Bramwell Booth and Ballington Booth shook hands yesterday as the luncheon guests of Rev. Alden L.
Bennett, a mutual friend. The meeting was private, and, according to announcement, was "a brotherly one entirely concerned with personal matters." Presumably the suggested amalgamation of the Salvation Army and the Volunteers of America, of which the brothers are the respective heads, was not broached.

Dynamite Sticks on Auto Drive.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 25.—The police let it be known yesterday that for three weeks automobilists have been flirting with death as they drove along Grant boulevard, the favorable motor track between the fashionable east end district and downtown Pittsburg. During that time they have collected 120 sticks of dynamite apparently scattered systematically along the road. Late Sunday they located another lot in the boulevard and arrested Herman Leidman, alleging he knew something of the robbery of a contractors' magazine from which they declare the dynamite was stolen.

managing director of the company
owning the ill-fated Wexford and other vessels, recalled, was first examined by Crown Attorney Seager, and was reminded of his statement on Friday regarding Goderich harbor. Witness said that what he meant was that the harbor improvements were being made piecemeal. The Government was taking ten years to do what could and should be done in one year.
It simply meant putting more men
at work on the job. If the harbor were improved, as it should be, it would be a good harbor, capable of giving shelter to any boat. There was no other harbor on this side of Lake Huron that could be made a harbor of refuge.

Mr. Seager suggested a comparison of Lake Huron and the Georgian Bay
in point of safety, but the witness said the Georgian Bay had no terrors for him, as he had sailed it nearly all his life and knew it intimately. A good foghorn at Cove Island was one of the safeguards for boats entering the bay.

FEELING NEW TARIFF.

Canadian Export of Soil Products Rises Steadily.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—The Wilson-Underwood tariff bill, so far as the produce of the soil is concerned, is beginning to make its effects very manifest in Canadian exports to the United States. Exports of Canadian products, natural and manufactured,
to that country alone have increased for the month of October by nearly two million dollars over the same month last year.

The figures are: Canadian exports to United States in October, 1912,
$13,902,501; in October, 1913, $15,- 883,380. Foreign products passing through Canada to the United States in October, 1912, amounted to $1,- 974,719; in October, 1913, $1,515,- 653, thus showing a decrease in this traffic.

The Speaker.

It was his power of protesting that in the first place gave the speaker of the British house of commons his name. For the early members were not great at oratory and soon realized
the desirability of choosing a spokesman with a ready tongue and the courage to argue with the king. Hence came the title of "speaker," which was first given to Sir Thomas Hungerford in 1376.

Big and Little Ships.

Speaking of the problem of unsinkable ships, the New York Commercial says:

"Few people outside of practical shipbuilders and navigators understand the difference between a large vessel and a small one in point of structural strength. The strongest vessel that floats in the water is a common row-boat. One can take an ordinary row-boat and carry it by the ends or it can rest on cleats under each end without breaking in the middle. But the strongest man-of-war or ocean liner that floats today would break in two if subjected to a similar strain. The larger a vessel the weaker it becomes in this respect, and for this reason many apparently good ideas which work out well in model form have failed utterly when applied to large vessels."

Billions of Beans.

"Beans—what do you know about beans, even in New England?" writes
an American from Manchuria. "Come to Dairen and see the bean mills which turn out 63,000,000 pounds of bean oil in a year and over 10,000,000 bean
cakes, weighing about sixty-five pounds
each. Some beans! The bean cake,
from which the oil has been extracted,
goes for the most part to Japan, which country received last year about nine-tenths of the product. Japan also took over 100,000 tons of beans in natural form. Some beans!"—New York Tribune.

Champion Mean Man.

"My husband is a very mean man about some things," complained the wife to the woman around the corner.
"He has a deaf ear, and every time I try to call him down he acts as if he didn't hear me."

"That's certainly provoking," said the neighbor. "But one of his ears is good.
Why don't you talk into that?"

"He won't tell me which it is," wailed the wife.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"All is Well That Ends Well"

Along with dyspepsia comes nervousness, sleeplessness and general ill health. Why? Because a disordered stomach does not permit the food to be assimilated and carried to the blood. On the other hand, the blood is charged with poisons which come from this disordered digestion. In turn, the nerves are not fed on good, red blood and we see those symptoms of nervous breakdown. It is not head work that does it, but poor stomach work. With poor thin blood the body is not protected against the attack of germs of grip—bronchitis—consumption. Fortify the body now with

Oppose Centralization

Imperial and Naval Authorities in England Condemn Borden Plan.

Comparison of statements by leading Imperialists in Great Britain and of Mr. Borden in Canada leads irresistibly to two conclusions—that Mr. Borden is absolutely wrong in his centralizing naval policy and that his whole trend of thought is of a reactionary nature, repellant to the mother country as well as to Australia, New Zealand and South Africa. Mr. Borden has out-Toried the Tories in his anxiety to get back to conditions which made the Family Compact a name of evil repute in Canada.

Mr. Richard Jebb, the famous English naval and imperial authority, on November 4th, issued an appeal to the British admiralty to abandon "Its present policy of naval centralization and return to the plan of well organized co-operative alliance as laid down in the admiralty memorandum to Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1900."

Proceeding, Mr. Jebb says: "Free choice for Britain and compulsory choice for the Dominions. Is that their prescription for securing unity of the Empire until federation? The difference between 'may' and 'shall' is just the difference between the late liberty which made and sustained the present Empire and the new intolerance which by the abuse of loyalty would turn the Dominions into subject countries."

Admiral W. H. Henderson—"Until Imperial federation is secured, which will, I think, take much longer than ten years, the only form of naval policy under existing conditions which the motherland and her daughter nations can adopt must be on the lines undertaken by the Australian Commonwealth—the question is one of 'no taxation without representation,' by ignoring which we lost the American colonies."

Admiral Freemantle—"The admiralty at the request of the Commonwealth sent out Sir Reginald Henderson to confer with the Australian

EFFECT OF LOW TARIFF.

PRICES DECREASED IN U. S., JUMPED IN CANADA.

Early in October the Underwood Tariff went into effect in the United States, with free foodstuffs for the benefit of the American consumer. The result has been that Canadian exports of agricultural products jumped from $10,772,000 in October, 1912, to $32,292,000 during the month just passed, while Canadian exports of meat animals increased from $4,665,000 in October, 1912, to $6,587,000 in October, 1913. Free foodstuffs have caused American buyers to make a tremendous raid on the Canadian supplies, with the result of reduced prices in Canada—the cost of beef going up a dollar a hundred in Toronto almost immediately after the inauguration of the new tariff.

Instead of the Underwood tariff giving Canada the benefit of reciprocity as claimed by the Conservatives, it has given the American consumers all the benefits and the Canadian consumers all the hardships.

WHERE WILL THIS STOP?

It is stated that the estimates now being prepared by the various departments for the coming session of parliament include no less than $50,000,000 for public works, much of which is simply for the continuation of works started last session. This huge sum will undoubtedly be considerably added to with appropriations for new works before the next session is over. Hon. Robert Rogers is a record spender of the people's money.

CHEAP LABOR COMING.

During the first seven months of the present fiscal year, Canadian immigration shows a total of 327,913, made up as follows:

British.....	128,898
American.....	80,330
Other countries.....	118,715

During the corresponding period of last year the total immigration was 300,831, made up as follows:

British.....	118,497
American.....	100,140
Other countries.....	82,204

British immigration shows an increase of about ten thousand, American immigration a decrease of about twenty thousand, while there was an increase of over thirty-six thousand in the immigration from other countries. Under the existing policy the best immigration is apparently not encouraged, while efforts are devoted to getting in the hordes of cheap "foreign" labor. In everything that transpires under the present government the hands of their masters "the interests" are visible.

years before the Liberal government came to power imports from the Mother Country had steadily declined. In 1896 duty amounting to $7,358,514 was collected on imports from Great Britain of $32,979,742. The Fielding tariff and the British preference soon changed this. Decreases stopped and by 1911 duty amounting to $20,756,810 was collected on British importations valued at $109,936,462. There has been a slight increase since 1911, but nothing comparable to the States. Last year our imports from Great Britain amounted to $138,761,568, on which duty to the extent of $27,123,908 was collected.

The total duty collected by the Liberal government in 1897 at the close of its first year was $19,891,996. This had grown to $73,312,367 by 1911, the close of its last year—duties collected on imports less than quadrupling in 15 years. Immediately on the coming to power of the Conservative government there was a tremendous increase in duties, collections growing to $87,576,036, in 1912, and no less than $115,663,687 in 1913, or about six times as much as in 1897.

The natural result of Conservative administration is thus strikingly manifest in the great increase of percentage of duties collected and the enormous increase in taxation.

Small wonder that the Department of Labour figures showing the relative cost of general staple goods entering into the cost of living, reveal that as compared with prices of ten years ago (figured at 100) prices to-day stand at 136.8 with a jump of almost 1 point since September and nearly two points during the year. An extravagant Conservative government naturally means increased cost of living.

MEPHISTOPHELES.

No Satisfactory Proof as to the Origin of the Name Exists.

There has been much discussion concerning the origin of the word Mephistopheles in the past, which has, moreover, as yet ended in no very satisfactory conclusion. Some very bizarre explanations had been propounded before the time of Goethe, who was himself forced to own to the musician Zelter in a letter of Nov. 20, 1829, "I cannot give any definite answer to the question, 'Whence comes the name Mephistopheles?'"

According to one theory it was a hybrid Greco-Hebraic formation of mephis and tophel (the liar); according to another its etymology was entirely Greek—very dubious Greek—mephistophilos, "he who does not love the light." Though this derivation is hardly acceptable, it appears that this was the original form of the name, the second vowel being replaced by i at first in England, whence it was taken into the popular German mysteries.

In the "Goethe Jahrbuch" Herr Oelke gives an entirely novel derivation which, if farfetched, has at least the merit of originality. It is based on two names found in chapters 4 and 15 of the second book of Samuel

BLUNDERS OF ARTIST

Curious Examples In the Dome of the National Capitol.

In the dome of the capitol at Washington there are eight great paintings carefully designed and executed by artists for the adornment of the nation's greatest building. Yet if you look at them carefully you will find them to be either defective in technique or in error as to natural or historical facts.

One of the best known pictures in which Washington is shown resigning his commission to the national congress. There are two girls, almost life size, standing in the foreground. They are very young girls, but one of them has hands. One left hand rests on the shoulder of her companion; the other left hand is round her companion's waist. Doubtless the artist Trumbull painted both hands to see which he preferred and then forgot to put the superfluous hand.

Diagonally across the rotunda is a painting of the baptism of Pocahontas. Sitting in the foreground is Opechancanough, the uncle of Pocahontas; he is barefooted, and the artist has ten years, the only form of naval policy under existing conditions which the motherland and her daughter nations can adopt must be on the lines undertaken by the Australian Commonwealth—the question is one of 'no taxation without representation,' by ignoring which we lost the American colonies."

Admiral Freemantle—"The admiralty at the request of the Commonwealth sent out Sir Reginald Henderson to confer with the Australian government, and his proposals, though thorough and entailing heavy expenditures, were accepted by all parties, and were carried out by the Labour government loyally, so that the Australian unit is now in a fair way to completion while suitable defence and training establishments are being established. Surely this is an object lesson in the right course to adopt, and the enthusiasm of naval defence in the Commonwealth is in strong contrast to the unfortunate political difficulties in which Premier Borden has been involved in his endeavours to meet the Admiralty's views."

In the light of these statements how wide of the mark are the words of Premier Borden, on the closing day of parliament,—"In view of the fact that these proposals were made by the Government of Canada upon information which they had received from the British government through the Admiralty, which they regarded as disclosing grave conditions, it may be possible in the future to make right that which has been made wrong at the present—it is the firm intention and determination of this government to bring down at a later date proposals for the acquisition or construction of three battle-ships as was proposed in the Naval Aid Bill of 1912. Canada will take over and pay for and acquire these ships and will place them at the disposal of His Majesty the King."

LET THE LAW TAKE ITS COURSE.

CHATEAUGUAY PROTEST MUST NOT BE DELAYED LIKE THAT IN MAC-DONALD.

It will be interesting to watch the efforts of the Tories to prevent hearing of the Chateaugay election trial. By invoking every possible legal hindrance to the courts of justice they delayed the Macdonald protest from November 18th, 1912, until November 11th, 1913, with the result that for a year the riding was misrepresented, with a man sent to parliament by such notoriously corrupt methods that even Hon. Mr. Rogers did not dare defend them in court. The same Minister of Buy-Elections had charge of Chateaugay. Similar methods were practised by the same men who had worked in Macdonald. Will Hon. Mr. Rogers have the cynical audacity to follow the Macdonald precedent throughout?

It may be possible by a system of filing objections and appealing technical decisions from court to court to delay the Chateaugay protest until a general election is in sight. Will Premier Borden dare again to flout public opinion in this way after his pre-election promises "To expedite the hearing of election petitions—and to provide for the thorough investigation of corrupt practices?"

British immigration shows an increase of about ten thousand, American immigration a decrease of about twenty thousand, while there was an increase of over thirty-six thousand in the immigration from other countries. Under the existing policy the best immigration is apparently not encouraged, while efforts are devoted to getting in the hordes of cheap "foreign" labor. In everything that transpires under the present government the hands of their masters "the interests" are visible.

TARIFF CHANGES GROW. MARKED INCREASE IN THIS TAXATION UNDER BORDEN GOVERNMENT.

As regards the tariff, Canada is rapidly approaching a similar position to that she suffered from in 1896—and it is significant that just as in 1896, before the Liberals came to power, trade was languishing, so to-day there is a dropping off in trade, a relaxation of general prosperity, tight money, enormous taxation, and high prices. It has been the custom of the Conservatives to declare that the Liberal government did not reduce taxation. This is absolutely disproven by figures published by that well known Conservative, Hon. Dr. Reid, Minister of Customs.

According to this report, in 1896, when the Liberals came to power the percentage of duty on the total value of goods entered for consumption, both dutiable and free, was 18.28. Immediately there was a drop in taxation and by 1897 the percentage had dropped to 17.87.

The records for the following years are of considerable interest, since they show a steady decrease during the Laurier administration until it reached its lowest point, in 1911, the last year of Liberal rule, and immediately thereafter show a steady rise until in the year just passed the percentage of duties collected had gone up to 17.03, or not far from the point from which they had receded in 1896.

The percentage is as follows:

1897.....	17.87
1898.....	16.95
1899.....	16.70
1900.....	15.96
1901.....	16.06
1902.....	15.99
1903.....	15.87
1904.....	16.28
1905.....	16.04
1906.....	16.07
1907.....	15.66
1908.....	16.27
1909.....	16.11
1910.....	16.27

The extraordinary manner in which trade with the United States has developed in comparison with our British trade since the Borden government came to power is even more marked. It is evident that the "No trade nor truck with the Yankees," was conceived merely for election purposes. After the Liberals came to power in 1896 Canada collected $7,707,092 duty on imports of $58,574,024 from the States. By 1911 this had increased to a collection of $37,854,727 on imports of $284,934,739, an increase of about five fold in 15 years. With the advent of the Borden government came the enormous jump. For 1912 the duty on imports from the States was $49,177,584 on goods to the value of $256,354,478; while for last year the government collected duty amounting to $68,929,805 on importations from the States of $441,142,503—practically doubling in two years.

No such record is apparent in Canadian trade with Great Britain. For light." Though this derivation is hardly acceptable, it appears that this was the original form of the name, the second vowel being replaced by i at first in England, whence it was taken into the popular German mysteries.

In the "Goethe Jahrbuch" Herr Oelke gives an entirely novel derivation which, if farfetched, has at least the merit of originality. It is based on two names found in chapters 4 and 15 of the second book of Samuel, Pephiloschethu and Architophel. He reminds us that it was customary in the middle ages when giving names to evil spirits to refer to the Old Testament; hence the combination "Meph-istopheles."

The explanation is not perceptibly more absurd than others. Goethe himself had a trick of using the abbreviated form Mephisto when it suited the exigencies of his meter. It may be remembered that this particularly irritated Schopenhauer, who wrote in his pamphlet "On the Murder (Verbindung) of the German Language," "The foolish desire for brevity goes so far as to cut off even the devil's tail by writing Mephisto for Mephistopheles."—Westminster Gazette.

INSTINCT AND INTELLECT.

The Broad Difference Between the Acts of the Two Powers.

For many years it has been the custom to think of instinct and intelligence as set over against each other. The former represents the inherited reactions of the animal; the latter signifies those acts which the animal learns in the course of its individual life and its power to learn in this fashion.

Instinctive acts are "perfect" the very first time," while intelligent acts are slowly acquired. So far as an animal is dependent on its instincts, it is the victim of its ancestry and of its immediate environment. In so far as it is intelligent, it can adapt its environment to itself, can rise above its immediate surroundings and act in the light of a distant end to be accomplished.

Instinct is blind as to the outcome of its action. Intelligence foresees and modifies its behavior in the light of its foresight. The supreme example of instinct has been the wasp going through an elaborate course of action to provide food for its yet unhatched offspring, seeking out a particular species of caterpillar, stinging every segment just enough to stun the animal, but not kill it, and then depositing the worm at the bottom of its newly made nest where it has laid its egg, covering up the cell and then leaving, never to see the larvae nor to live to do the same act another season. The supremely intelligent animal is man, possessing the earth by the genius of his intellect.—H. E. Haggerty in Atlantic Monthly.

London's Gunpowder Alley.

The city coroner, who commented upon the "funny" name of Gunpowder alley (off Shoe lane) and confessed that he had never heard of it, may nevertheless have heard of the poet Lovelace, who died in the alley two years before the restoration. The lodging in which he died was a miserable one, but probably seemed to the poor poet released from prison a glorious palace, for he was philosopher enough already to have written that "stone walls do not a prison make." In this alley also lived the notorious astrologer, Lilly, the Sidrophel of "The House"—London Chronicle.

Diagonally across the rotunda painting of the baptism of Pocahontas in the foreground is Pocahontas, the uncle of Pocahontas is barefooted, and the artist has on him six toes on his left foot.

In the painting of the landing of Columbus, which used to be reproduced on the five dollar banknote, the artist has painted three flags. They are well drawn, but one is blowing one west and one south, which creates a very variable condition of wind on that famous day.

In the picture of the surrender of Cornwallis General Washington is conspicuously seated upon a white horse. But General Washington was not out at the surrender. Cornwallis sent a subordinate officer to do so. Accordingly Washington detailed an officer of corresponding rank to receive the surrender. It would have been a breach of military etiquette for Washington to be present.

No Use For Fresh Air.

Old time doctors had no faith in the virtues of fresh air. Andrew Rees in his "Compendious Regimen of Diet and Health," published in 1759, writes: "To bedward and also in morning use to have a fire in chamber, to waste and consume vapours within the chamber, for breath of man may putrefy within the chamber. In the night the windows of your house, spec of your chamber, be closed, let nightcap be of scarlet, and this, advertise you, to cause to be made good thick quilt of cotton, or else pure flocks or of clean wool, and the covering of it be of white furs and lay it on the feather bed that do lie on."—London Chronicle.

Dead Easy.

Two guests missed the first course of a dinner at a suburban home, which had been arranged partly in honor. Hand bags had been searched, distant homes called on the telephone for information, much nerve had been expended, all because key to the trunk containing the necessary dinner raiment could not be found. Finally a locksmith from town four miles away came by a mobile, was led to the trunk, and in less than a minute the lid was unlocked.

"Good work," said the maid.
"Dead easy," said the locksmith; "thing wasn't locked at all."—New York Tribune.

THE NORTHERN LIGHTS.

It's a Mistake, Says a Scientist, to Say They Emit Sounds.

German scientists are greatly interested in a discussion regarding new phenomena revealed by the aurora borealis, according to recent Norwegian and German observers. People living in the northern part of Norway maintained that they often hear sounds accompanying the northern lights. These sounds are described by some as similar to the crackling of flames.

Accordingly German and Norwegian scientists started out to investigate the phenomena, and one of them, Olav Aabakken, has spent a long time at the Halde observatory in Finnmarken. Aabakken thinks that it is very unlikely that any sound is to be heard from the northern lights. He maintains that the human senses are not to be relied on, especially regarding the phenomena of sight.

Aabakken says that the idea of sound connected with the northern lights may result from the fact that these lights look like flames, and as people are accustomed to associate the crackling sound with flames the rather uncritical observer of the blazing

THINGS HE DIDN'T KNOW.

They Were Many, but That Didn't Keep Him From Giving an Opinion.

A well known architect was summoned as a witness in a Long Island court in a suit over the cost of a building. The lawyer whose duty it was to cross examine started in to attack the credibility of the witness.

"Do you know how much a hundred these bricks cost?"

"I do not."

"Do you know how much this cement cost per bag?"

"No."

"Do you know how expensive sand is down here?"

"I can't say that I do exactly."

The lawyer looked at the witness with fine scorn.

"And yet you pretend to come here and qualify as an expert. How can you give any kind of an opinion on how much this building ought to have cost when you don't know the prices of the material it's made of?"

The witness looked at the lawyer with a flash in his eye that boded ill.

"Well," he said, "I don't know the price of needles nor the price of thread nor how much cheap cotton material costs, but I don't hesitate to express a solemn opinion that that suit of clothes you're wearing cost about $5.50."—New York Post.

CROOKED BILLET INN.

London's Oldest Public House and Its Romantic Interior.

The Crooked Billet, an inn which stands upon Tower hill, boasts itself, says the London Graphic, as the oldest public house in London. How far back its history goes it would be impossible to say. The records are wanting, but there is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved.

In the principal reception room are to be seen some magnificent oak panelings, a quaintly carved frieze above the door and a no less richly carved mantelpiece. The ceiling is covered with a number of strange devices, with a female head—believed to represent Queen Elizabeth—in the center. The windows looking out upon the street are fastened with shutters clamped with huge iron bars.

There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet. The place was known in those days as "the old house at the bottom of the Minories."

Choate and Depew.

At an annual dinner of the St. Nicholas society Ambassador Joseph H. Choate was down for the toast "The Navy," while Senator Depew was to respond to "The Army."

Depew began by saying: "It's well to have a specialist. That's why Choate is here to speak about the navy. We met at the wharf once, and I never saw him again till we reached Liverpool. When I asked how he felt he said he thought he would have enjoyed the trip over if he had had any ocean air. Yes, you want to hear Choate on the navy."

Choate responded: "I've heard Depew

TWISTING THE LANGUAGE.

English Has Received Some Severe Jolts In the Philippines.

Baby talk is a highly developed language compared to the jargon American housewives talk to their Filipino house boys. But it usually conveys the meaning when accompanied by expressive gestures. At best, however, the performance of the command speaks well for native intuition.

Spanish construction of English words is another twist that our poor language gets in the Philippines. "No go!" in the island is the most commonly used expression for "I haven't any." Similarly "no can do" means "I can't," and "no want" means "I don't want it." Not only between American and Filipino, but among Americans themselves, this twisted construction has largely supplanted the legitimate one.

With the soldier anything that belonged peculiarly to the Philippines was described as "bamboo." Now all colonials use the term. The "bamboo fleet" is the one assigned to Philippine waters, and the "bamboo government" is the Philippine civil government in distinction from the United States military.

on the sidewalks as he made his way
about town whether he was in the middle of the walk or at one side,
whether he was walking past a brick

town he was not only by his memory or sense of general direction, but by the difference in the "tones" of his footsteps, and he walked about freely, seldom running into anything or any body. Some one in his presence once called in question his total blindness.

"Which eye do you think I can see with?" he asked the skeptic.

"The left one, of course," was the reply. "I can see that the right one is left eye with the little blade.

Freaks of Nature.

Monument park, near Colorado

more feet high capped with a thin

semble the tops of giant mushrooms which have shriveled and partially dried up. The dark colored capping being of a much harder (ironstone)
rock than the pillars has to some ex tent protected the latter from disinte

Returned the Compliment.

Shortly after the workmen had fin ished the landlord took especial pains to show to each tenant the bill for doing over his flat. The householders regarded that attention in different lights, according to the improvements they had fought for and got. Some looked frightened, thinking it portend
ed a raise in rent, some apologetic, oth ers defiant. The third floor right man was noncommittal. Three days later he called at the landlord's office and showed him a slip of paper. It was a bill for six shirts, some socks and ties,
a hat and a blue serge suit.

"What's this got to do with me?" the landlord asked.

"Oh, nothing," said the man. "Just an interchange of courtesies. Nothing like being neighborly, you know."

Few Russians Wear Hats.

The male population of Russia wear ing hats is in the great minority as compared with the vast number who purchase the Russian cap. The sea sons are practically winter and sum mer, so that the transition from the cloth cap is to one of fur, the straw hat coming in for slight attention dur ing a brief period in midsummer. The student class, which aggregates many thousands, and the official class, which is still more numerous, with those in the city who wear a uniform cap with an official or semiofficial cockade, con stitute a vast army of people who do not wear hats.

Among other "soldierisms" (if I may

Tagalog and Moro expressions in con

BOATS GROW ON TREES.

West Indian Boys Can Get All of Them
They Want.

When a West Indian boy wants a toy boat all he has to do is to visit a cocoanut tree. These trees bear great bunches of nuts among their drooping
green leaves, and when the bunch
first sprouts out in the form of a big bud it is inclosed within a hard,
tough, woody case or spathe two or three feet long, eight or ten inches in diameter and tapering to a point at one end and to a slender stem at the other. In fact, it looks very much like a huge wooden cigar.

As the buds and flowers develop the spathe splits open, and the flower
bunch continues to grow out beyond it until the nuts begin to ripen. By this time the spathes have become dry and hard and break off and drop to the ground of their own accord.

It is the spathes or bud coverings
that the West Indian boys use for toy boats, and, while the dry and fallen ones will answer, better boats are made from the more flexible and part ly green spathes still clinging to the flower stem.

The spathe as gathered from the tree is almost in the shape of a boat, and all that is necessary to transform it to a very seaworthy and fast sailing toy
canoe is to sew the open end together and fit rudder, sail and seats or thwarts.

When this is done the boat is almost an exact model of the big dugout can oes that the boys' fathers use in fish
ing. In fact, these dugouts were prob ably copied from one of the tree grown boats.—From "Harper's Book For Young Naturalists."

A Perpetual Error.

A printer's error in perpetuity! How many know that when joining in the "Te Deum" they are carrying on, in one phrase of that song of praise, an ancient blunder? "Make them to be numbered with thy saints;" so it runs.
And so when manuscript copies gave place to printed books was it rendered in the medieval Latin then in use, "nu merari"—"to be numbered," as we say in English. Transpose the first and third letters and you get "munerari,"
"to be rewarded," which is what all prayer books would be printing today
and congregations singing were it not for that fifteenth century printer's error.—London Tatler.

The New Scale Williams Piano

This great instrument is an entirely new piano—the result of years of evolution in piano-building. It is declared by artists and music-lovers all over Canada to meet every artistic musical requirement.

The Harmonic Tone-Prolonging Bridge

is a distinctive New Scale Williams feature. A brilliant yet mellow and sympathetic tone of wonderful carrying power is procured through the use of this bridge, which is cast in the plate in one solid piece. Results that have been despaired of for years by piano-makers are attained at last through this exclusive New Scale Williams patent.

It Didn't Happen

The enviable position attained by the New Scale Williams in the esteem of particular musical people is not the result of chance. The best brains, highest scientific knowledge and experience and skill of an exceptionally high order have been employed for years in experimenting, testing and discarding until a piano could be produced that would be really great and compare to advantage with other great pianos either in Europe or America.

You will be interested in looking over the many manifest advantages of the New Scale Williams. Call at the nearest dealer's, or else write direct for booklet and descriptive literature.

GEORGE LEAVITT MAIR.

A life long resident of Napanee

a slight stroke about a week previous to his death from which he never rallied. The late Mr. Mair, in com-

Mair, carried on a foundry and mach-

of years and were well known throughout the district. Mr. Mair also held a position of town engineer for a long number of years having charge of the fire engine, a position he held to the time of his death. Mr. Mair leaves one son, Mr. Chas. Mair, Chicago, and two daughters, Mrs. McMillan, Hespler;

ON BACK OF MAIL MATTER.

Christmas "Seals" May be Used, Says
Postmaster-General.

So long as they are unlike Postage Stamps in design, and are placed on the backs of letters, Christmas Seals—
they aren't "stamps" any longer—
will be permissible on mail matter.
This is the effect of a fiat issued by the Postmaster-General a day or so ago,
and it will set at rest many doubts
which arose last year when an order was promulgated which bade fair to destroy one of the best sources of revenue open to Charitable Organizations in Canada.

Several philanthropic bodies use the little seals, the best known of them being the National Sanitarium Association, which converts the proceeds to the Muskoka Free Hospital for Con-sumptives. In compliance with the request for a design which will not confuse Mail Clerks, this Association has had a new seal made to take the place of the well known Santa Claus in green red. This year's design shows
a mediaeval Knight in full armour,
with bouble cross shield on his arm
and on the hand which encloses the picture appears the words, "The White Crusader." The first supply of the seals will number three millions and the enthusiasm with which schools
and private concerns are taking up the work of distribution forecasts that this inexpensive and unobtrusive form of Christmas giving will this Christmas exceed all previous records.

From His Honor Sir John M. Gibson,
Lientenant-Governor of Ontario,

TO THE PEOPLE OF ONTARIO:

The Honorable the Minister of Education for the Province of Ontario
has recommended that on Friday, November 28th, the Trustees and the Principals of the schools throughout the Province shall call special attention to the subject of Tuberculosis and the imperative duty of combatting and,
within the shortest possible time, wiping
out the disease from amongst us.
The Ministerial Association of Toronto and the Churches of the Province have set apart November 30th as Tuberculosis Sunday. In probably 1,000 Churches throughout Ontario special reference will be made on that day to the effective work being done by the National Sanitarium Association, in their thoroughly equipped institutions in Muskoka and Weston, as well as by other associations and agencies, toward prevention and cure of Tuberculosis. This widespread campaign should be most influential in intensifying the already deep interest in the battle for stamping out the White Plague. Having intimate knowledge of the work being done by, and the plans for the future of, the National Sanitarium Association, I do not hesitate to urge and exhort the Ministers of every Church, and the Trustees and Principals of every school throughout the Province

UNGRATEFUL ALL THE HUMAN RACE

"O Come, Let Us Give Thanks Unto
the Lord; For He Is Good."

Ingratitude a Sin and a Shame—All
Should Render Praise—Though Not All May Pray—The Difference—Causes For Thankfulness
—Why So Few Respond—Causes
of Ingratitude and Discontent.

PASTOR RUSSELL

gratitude is one of the least excusable sins, and deplored that it is manifested everywhere. Rich and poor, learned and ignorant, appear to be growing in the spirit of ingratitude, discontent and murmuring, in the face of the world's greatest blessings. With the dawning of the New Era God is showering blessings everywhere. Yet the day of the world's favors is the day of the greatest discontent.

Lessons From the Brutes.

The Pastor then demonstrated that even the family dog exhibits
more of the spirit of loyalty, reverence, and confidence in his master
than man, with a higher intellect, exercises toward the Almighty. The brute creation properly regard man
as their god; for this is the Divine arrangement. Man is in the likeness of his Creator, who is God of the universe. With shame we acknowledge that the ox knoweth his owner,
and the ass his master's crib, yet
man seems bent upon ignoring his Maker!

There is a reason for this. The formation of the human brain shows that reverence and gratitude to God
would be man's natural disposition;
for the organs of spirituality lie at the apex. Why, then, he asked, the endeavor to forget God and to account for His blessings and mercies
as mere matters of chance?

"An Enemy Hath Done This."

Pastor Russell next discussed the parable of the Wheat and the Tares,
in which our Lord declares that He sowed good seed—pure Truth, intended to bring forth loyal children of God. After the Apostles had fallen asleep in death, Satan oversowed the field with tare-seed—false doctrines. In due time the tareseed produced in the Church a terrible crop of demon doctrines, to misrepresent God and His purposes.

The Pastor holds that these demon doctrines have driven the masses away from God. It is really to the credit of intelligent people that they refuse to accept the God of the creeds, who, they are told, foreordained the eternal torture of the human race long before its creation, and made every preparation for human suffering to all eternity. Told that the Bible is authority for such atrocious theories, the world is re-

mon doctrines have driven the masses away from God. It is really to the credit of intelligent people that they refuse to accept the God of the creeds, who, they are told, foreordained the eternal torture of the human race long before its creation, and made every preparation for human suffering to all eternity. Told that the Bible is authority for such atrocious theories, the world is repudiating God's Word.

The speaker then pointed out that his text contradicts the creedal teachings. Twenty-five times in this one Psalm is the endlessness of Divine mercy repeated. Yet Christians have long declared that God's mercy is only for the Elect; that the masses will have no mercy; that there will be no mercy beyond the grave—that God's mercy endures merely for what we call the present life!

Why, he asked, do we thus contradict the Almighty? In so doing, we have had Satan's encouragement, and visions and dreams caused by the fallen angels. St. Paul pictures our day exactly, saying, "Many shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons."

Tell the Truth—Shame the Devil.

The Pastor then urged all who love the Lord to get straight themselves and to help others. The world should know what real cause it has for gratitude to God. Mankind should be told that Christ's death will be the full offset of Adam's sin; and that during Messiah's thousand-year Reign humanity will rise out of sin and death to righteousness and life everlasting.

The Bible Hell is the tomb, Sheol, Hades, from which all will have opportunity for resurrection to perfection of life, the wilfully wicked alone dying the Second Death, illustrated by Gehenna. On the basis of knowledge of God's great Plan of Salvation, the world will be ready to acknowledge God's mercy and to render thanks to Him.

Thanksgiving Day.

Next the Pastor discussed Thanksgiving Day, set apart for thanksgiving to God for the blessings of the year past. With the majority it has deteriorated into a mere holiday. Unbelief has grown with higher education; for the educated, repelled by misrepresentations of the Almighty, have turned away from the God of the Bible, and are instructing the rising generation in infidelity, unbelief in the Bible.

The only way back to God, faith, contentment and thanksgiving, he declared, is through the dissemination of the knowledge of the glory of God—that His mercy endureth forever, that He has only begun His salvation in gathering the Church, and that it shall eventually extend to whosoever will, during Messiah's Reign.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—Offerings at the Montreal Stock Yards west end market today consisted of 1800 cattle, 750 sheep and lambs, 1400 hogs and 400 calves.

The strength which developed in the market for cattle a week ago was more pronounced today, and prices for good to choice butchers' steers scored a further advance of 40c to 50c, and common stock 25c per 100 pounds. A feature of the trade was the scarcity of good, useful butchers' stock, for which the demand was good, as both packers and butchers were short of supplies, and in consequence the tone was strong at the advance above noted. A few loads of choice steers were offered, for which the competition was keen, and sales of full loads were made at $7.50 to $8, and a few picked lots brought as high as $8.25 per 100 pounds. Good cattle in a jobbing way sold at $7.50 to $7.75. The gathering of buyers was large, and an active trade was done.

The tone of the market for lambs continues very strong, on account of the limited supplies coming forward, and prices have scored a further advance of 25c per 100 pounds. The demand from packers and butchers was good, and an active trade was done, with sales of western stock at $7.75 to $8, and eastern at $7.25 to $7.50 per 100 pounds. Sheep were firm, with a good demand for ewes at $4.75 to $5 per 100 pounds.

An easier feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, and prices were 10c per 100 pounds lower than a week ago.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.90 to $8.25; do., medium, $6 to $7; do., common, $4.50 to $5.50; canners, $3.65 to $3.75; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6.50 to $6.75; do., medium, $5.25 to $5.50; do., bulls, $5 to $6.25; milkers, choice, $85 to $90; do., common and medium, each, $75 to $80; springers, $65 to $70.

Sheep, ewes, $4.75 to $5; bucks and culls, $4.25 to $4.50; lambs, $7.25 to $8. Hogs, f.o.b., $9.25 to $9.50. Calves, $5 to $15.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Cattle—Receipts, 16,000; market, slow; beefs, $6.60 to $9.25; Texas steers, $6.40 to $7.60; western steers, $5.90 to $7.75; stockers and feeders, $4.80 to $7.40; cows and heifers, $3.25 to $8.20; calves, $6.50 to $11.

Hogs—Receipts, 35,000; market, weak; light, $7.15 to $7.70; mixed, $7.35 to $7.85; heavy, $7.35 to $7.90; rough, $7.35 to $7.50; pigs, $5 to $7; bulk of sales, $7.50 to $7.80.

Sheep—Receipts, 38,000; market, steady; native, $3.50 to $5; western, $4 to $6.90; yearlings, $5.15 to $6.35; lambs, native, $5.85 to $7.50; western, $5.85 to $7.50.

AN OLD INDIAN LEGEND.

The Incidents That Led Up to the Naming of Poughkeepsie.

During the days when the Indians still held sway on the banks of the Hudson there was a fierce battle between the Delaware and the Pequot tribes. The former won, and among their captives was a handsome young Pequot brave. He was offered his life if he would swear allegiance to the Delawares and be branded with their tribal mark—the turtle. He refused, and preparations were then made to kill him. As his enemies were on the point of doing this a young Indian girl broke into the circle and begged for his life. She had at one time been a Pequot, but had been captured by the Delawares and forced to join their tribe. Her appeals were so touching that the warriors were debating the matter when the party was attacked by still another enemy, the Huron Indians. In the excitement the girl cut her lover's bonds, but the two found themselves in the midst of a fierce battle and eventually became separated. The young warrior escaped, but the girl was captured by a Huron chief.

Determined to rescue her at any cost, the Pequot brave disguised himself as a medicine man and entered the camp of the Hurons. By some pretext he gained admission to the tent where the girl was kept prisoner, and late at night they managed to escape in the darkness. Their flight was soon discovered and pursuit began, but the young couple reached the river far enough in advance of their pursuers to embark in a canoe and push off from shore. They were still followed, but the warrior was young and strong and succeeded in getting his little craft safely into a cove at the junction of the great river and a little stream entering into it between two high, protecting banks, where they hid, and later found a friendly tribe.

Rejoicing that the place had been a "safe harbor" for the girl and her lover in time of peril, it was so designated in the Pequot tongue, the Indian equivalent being "Apa-keep-sieck." Today, after having filtered through the Dutch and English tongues, it is known as Poughkeepsie.—Ladies' Home Journal.

CURIOUS HERMIT CRABS.

They Keep Housemaids, and Also Use Sponges For Protection.

It has been said that crabs are as artful as "a barrow load of monkeys," and no one who has read Professor Edward Step's "Messmates; A Book of Strange Companionships In Nature," will deny that there is considerable truth in the remark. Amazing indeed are some of the revelations which the professor makes regarding crabs.

He relates, for instance, how the common hermit crab actually keeps a housemaid to clean out his house. When he first starts life this particular species of crab hunts for some large shellfish's shell in which he can live at ease, rent free. He usually chooses a large whelk shell and introduces a large seaworm, belonging to what is known as the "nerels" family and which grows to a length of six or eight inches, to keep the interior of the shell clean. The crab feeds heartily on sea creatures that wander carelessly into the shell and throws the indigestible parts of them about the floor. The nerels worm promptly consumes these remains and keeps the shell as clean as a new pin.

The artfulness of this crab, too, is strikingly illustrated by the ingenious manner in which he protects himself against the large fish which look upon him as an excellent article of food. Sometimes he induces a sponge to grow on his shell. Sponges in a living condition give out a strong odor, which is distinctly unpleasant to fish, and even a dogfish will not attack a crab protected in this manner.

Two Kinds of Snobs.

An interesting sense history is that of the word snob, a term of obscure origin, in its earliest use, in 1871, meaning a shoemaker or cobbler. Now there is a distinction between the English and the American use of snob—a distinction due to the influence of aristocratic as compared with democratic traditions. An English snob is a man who falls short of the perfect aristocrat through a taint of democratic vulgarity. An American snob is a man who falls short of the perfect democrat through a taint of aristocratic exclusiveness.—New York Post.

Canalboat Travel Before Railroads.

So prodigiously good was the eating and drinking on board these sluggish but most comfortable canalboats that there are legends extant of an English traveler who, coming to Belgium for a week and traveling in one of these vessels, was so delighted with the fare there that he went backward and forward from Ghent to Bruges all the rest of his life.—From Timbs' "English Eccentrics."

BECOMES VERY MYSTERIOUS.

But Girlhood Portrait of Mrs. B. Made by the Office Boy Fails to Elicit Praise From Neighbor—Divorce Again Impends in Bowser Home.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

FOR a few minutes after dinner the other evening there was something of a mystery around the Bowser mansion. Mr. Bowser insisted on answering a ring at the basement bell, and there was a whispered conversation and a large package taken in. Then he asked Mrs. Bowser if she wouldn't run upstairs and busy herself for a quarter of an hour. She complied without asking any questions and by and by was told that she might come down. She found Mr. Bowser beaming with good nature. He was even holding the cat on his lap.

"And now about all this mystery?" queried Mrs. Bowser.

"Sit down, dear, and let us have a little talk. I'm an old kicker of a husband, ain't I?"

"Why, I suppose you are like all other husbands."

"I'm a heap worse, and I'm ashamed of it. I've been thinking things over for the last week, and I'm wondering how you have stood it with me as well as you have. If I'd married any other woman there'd have been a divorce long ago."

Mrs. Bowser fully realized that Mr. Bowser in too good nature was just as dangerous as Mr. Bowser in a kicking mood, and she simply replied that she had no fault to find and called his attention to a new book she had bought that day. He was not to be switched off, however.

When First They Met.

"Do you remember our first meeting?" he asked, as he melted a little more. "I was at your house to see your father, and you entered the room.

a photograph twelve years old had been done by the office boy. Bowser's office. He was a boy without a lazy hair in his head. When he wasn't going to the office or sweeping out he was painting portraits or hunting around hand stores to find frames which he cut down to fit them. His in had given Mr. Bowser an idea. Mrs. Bowser's crayon was the best it had come in for $3 per except the frame.

Likeness Not Apparent.

"Why—why—who is it?" asked Bowser, as she stood before the picture. Being from her oldest graph, and the style being so a she could not recognize herself.

"Who is it?" echoed Mr. Bowser. He slipped his arm around her and gave her a kiss. "Well, it's the picture of the best little wife on this earth, and she's standing beside me at this moment! Have you got to say about it?"

"It—it was awfully kind of you."

"Don't mention it. I wish I have presented you with forty. It's you to a dot. I think it the piece of work I ever saw. It will make his mark if he keeps it. Now, then, I'm going to ask and his wife to run in and look."

"I don't think I would—not to."

"And why? Davis claims to all about art and I want his criticism. He'll try to find some flaw, but have mighty hard work. Mrs. Bowser will probably want one done same boy."

"I don't think they are honest evening," said Mrs. Bowser, tried to hide her feelings and closer look at the picture.

The crayon was the work of an old white and industry. The boy wasn't up on background considered backgrounds and grounds a useless waste of money. He never had taken particular of how the head and arms of low beings were nailed on, working from a photograph of a corrected several mistakes of the photographer. He had enlarge month, been generous with it and given the chin a slant on tired new line.

Many Improvements Made.

He had also improved the match the mouth—that is, one was cocked up in surprise a other drawn down in a squint. Bowser's heart stood still as she saw all these things and a dozen. That crayon was a token of how could she find fault with it? She gave Mr. Bowser a look and ran upstairs, as if to hide herself. He was calling it cynicism chuckling and rubbing his hand. Davis walked in.

"What on earth is that?" he asked as he looked at the crayon.

"And you don't recognize it?" claimed Mr. Bowser.

"Hanged if I do, or you either may be your cook, your grand or the woman who sells hors on the streets. Ye gods! Bows it down!"

"What's wrong with it?"

"It would scare a horse if you it up in the stable. Why, I can a stick of crayon between my t do better work. For heaven's but don't let your wife see it!"

"The coachman has been telling me a capital ghost story. He believes them to be beneficent and declares that he will under no circumstances leave my employment."

She sat down and folded her arms upon the table. For the first time I believed that she was serious. There was, in fact, a troubled look on her sweet, whimsical face. It occurred to me that the loss of her servants was not really the slight matter she had previously made of it.

"Mr. Ames, will you pardon me for asking you a question of the most intimate character? It is only after much hesitation that I do so."

I bowed encouragingly, my curiosity fully aroused.

"You may ask me anything in the world, Miss Hollister."

"Then I wish you would tell me whether—I can't express the dislike I feel in doing this—but can you tell me whether you have seen in the hands of my niece Cecilia a small, a very small, silver backed notebook?"

"Yes; I have," I answered, greatly surprised.

"And may I ask whether—and again I must plead deep concern as an excuse for making such an inquiry—whether you by any chance saw her making any notation in that book?"

I recalled the silver bound book perfectly, but had attached no importance to it, but if Cecilia's fortunes were so intimately related to it as Miss Hollister's manner implied, I felt that I must be careful of my answer. I was trying to recall the precise moment at which I had entered the library the preceding evening after Hume's departure, and while I was intent upon this my silence must have been prolonged. I felt obliged to make an answer of some sort, and yet I did not relish the thought of conveying information that might distress and embarrass a noble girl like Cecilia Hollister. Something in my face must have conveyed a hint of this inner conflict to Miss Hollister, for she rose suddenly, holding up her hand as though to silence me. She seemed deeply moved and cried in agitation:

"Do not answer me! The question was quite unfair—quite unfair—and yet I assure you that at the moment I made the inquiry I felt justified."

She retreated toward the door as I rose, and then, with her composure fully restored, she courtesied gracefully.

"Luncheon here! Will be a buffet affair today, as I shall be engaged with matters of pastry. I'm sure, of dignity, the porter yanking me aboard under the conductor's scornful eye. The Katonah passengers were still in the aisle, and as I surveyed them I saw Cecilia take a seat in the middle of the car. She was just unfolding a newspaper when I moved to a seat behind her and bade her good morning.

The look she gave me in turning round had in it something of Hezekiah's quizzical humor. This interested me, because I had not previously seen any but the most superficial resemblance between the sisters. Her cheeks were aglow from her sprint on the wheel.

"We are both truants. You must have breakfasted in a hurry to have caught this train."

"Not at all. I enjoyed a brief conversation with your sister, and after she had gone your aunt came back and she lingered for a moment."

"She told you, I suppose, that Providence would look after the servant question. I'm going to assist Providence a little."

"You become the vicar of Providence? I admire your spirit."

"It's mere self preservation. Aunt Octavia would have me chained to the kitchen if I didn't do something about it."

She had permitted me to settle with the conductor, and when I had completed this transaction I found that she had drawn from her purse the little silver booklet about which Miss Octavia had inquired so anxiously. She raised her eyes with the faraway look in them.

"Can you tell me how to spell Arrowood—is it one or two w's?"

"One I think the noble lord uses."

I seemed to write the name, and I saw her counting on her fingers, touching them lightly on the open page of the book.

Then she dropped it into her purse, which she fastened back carefully into her pocket. She sighed and was silent. I gave her in detail the story of the ghost, and my recital seemed to amuse her greatly.

"You thought it was Aunt Octavia herself at first, then you thought I was the spook, and now you are not fully persuaded that it is not my father. I will take you into my confidence this far—that I don't know how father got into the house last night. He wrote a note asking me to meet him on the roof and bring the foils. That was not unlike him, as he is the dearest father in the world, and his whims are just as jolly in their way as Aunt Octavia's. I was sure that Aunt Octavia had retired for the night, so I changed my dress and carried the foils up through the trunk room. I had hardly reached there before my father appeared. The whole situation—my being there and all that—has distressed father."

"You think," she asked, "that those lights couldn't have winked out twice by themselves while you were on the stairway?"

"I am positive of it. And somebody—a being of some sort—passed me on the stairway. It might imaginably have been you."

"But I tell you positively it was not."

"Then it might have been your father. A man who can enter a house at will might easily play any manner of other tricks. His disappearance after I had gone down into the house with him was just as mysterious as the ghost."

"It was natural for father not to want you to know how he got in. The motive for that would be the fact that he is not supposed to see me or communicate with me in any way."

Aunt Octavia's guest and don't annoy her by failing to appear at dinner. You know you haven't fixed that chimney yet."

Her smile left me well in the air. I stood staring after the very commonplace cab as it rolled away with her, my mind whirling chaos of emotion. The crowd jostled me impatiently, for other people, not breathing celestial ether from an hour of Cecilia Hollister's society, were bent upon the day's business.

CHAPTER XIII.

At the Asolando Again.

I set off at once for Pepperton's office, where I learned that the architect was out of town. But his chief clerk greeted me courteously. I told him frankly that I wanted to look at the plans of Hopefield Manor to enable me to learn the exact lines of the chimney. He confessed surprise that there were causing trouble and expressed regret that they were not in the office.

"Miss Hollister sent for them this morning, and I have just given them to a young woman who bore a note from her."

I was taken aback to find that she had anticipated me in my rush for the plans of the house. Clearly I was dealing with a woman who was not only immensely amusing, but exceedingly shrewd as well. Could it be possible after all that she was herself playing ghost merely for her own entertainment? She was capable of it. But I had satisfied myself that she could not have performed the tricks of which I had been the victim the night previous unless she possessed some rare vanishing power like that of the East Indian mystics.

"May I ask who came for the plans?"

I judged the young woman to be a maid, or perhaps she was Miss Hollister's secretary.

I had given little heed during my short stay at Hopefield Manor to Miss Hollister's personal attendant. I had passed her in the halls once or twice, a young woman of twenty-five, I should say, fair haired and blue eyed. She might herself be the ghost now that I thought of it. But this seemed the most unlikely hypothesis possible.

At my own office my assistant pounced upon me wrathfully. He was half wild over the pressure of vexatious business and had just been engaging in a long distance conversation with a country gentleman at Lenox which had left him in bad temper. I was explaining to him the seriousness of my errands at Hopefield, rather unconvincingly, I fear, and the fact that I must return at once when the office boy entered my private room to say that three gentlemen wished to see me immediately. They had submitted cards, but had refused to state the nature of their business. It was with a distinct sensation of surprise that I read the names respectively of Percival B. Shallenberger, Daniel P. Ormsby and John Stewart Dick.

"Show the gentlemen in," I said promptly, greatly to the disgust of my assistant, who retired to deal with several clients whom I had passed in the reception room fiercely walking the floor.

I had imagined all the suitors established at the Prescott Arms. As the three appeared clad in light automobile coats I could not forbear a smile at their grim appearance. Shallenberger, the novelist, and Ormsby, the knit goods manufacturer, were big men. Dick, the Nebraska philosopher, was much shorter,

"You insult me, but my pe grievances must wait," said brokenly; "but, speaking for committee, I wish to say that attention to the young lady you have dared, sir, to name a noxious to us."

"Nothing less than that!" Shallenberger.

"We will not stand for it," growled Ormsby's heavy bass.

"Mr. Shallenberger," I remarked, "as a member of the Hopster school of novelists I the most profound respect for talents. My niece boy is dead world for weeks after the appearance of a novel from your pen. But interference in my private affairs beyond all reason. And as for Mr. Ormsby, I dare say your goods are worthy of the famous pentup Utica from which you. But to you and all of you I b fiancé. I return to Hopefield by the 4:14 express."

I rose and bowed coldly in dismissal, but the trio stood there stubbornly.

"I tell you, sir, our organization is complete!" declared Dick. "We had a gentlemen's agreement on the night for the express purpose of excluding you, and you cannot enter a competitor. You are only a sider, and we don't intend to you interfering with our affairs."

"By the pink left ear of Venus blurted, 'is it a trust?'"

"You put it coarsely, Mr. but—"

"A suitors' trust? Then, if I the newspapers correctly, your organization is against public policy in contravention of the anti law. But may I inquire why, I have perfected a combination of Hollister's suitors, I found Arrowood this morning sitting stone by the roadside, evident the greatest dejection. Can it be sible that an insurgent has crept your organization and incurred displeasure of the regulars?"

"We ruled him out," Shallenberger burst forth, "because he was a eigner and not entitled to a among freeborn Americans; Th one reason, and, for another, the ors of his half hose were an ot to me personally."

"And for another reason," I posed Ormsby, "he had no m with which to pay his board at Prescott Arms. For this just the landlord ejected him shortly breakfast this morning."

"Then there is already a rift in lute!" I returned. "No trust suitors is stronger than its weak link. My hand is raised against unrighteous compact, and I am in fight to stay! Go back to the Prescott Arms, gentlemen, and as your associates in this hideous pact of my most distinguished sideration and tell them to go to the devil."

She retreated toward the door as I rose, and then, with her composure fully restored, she courtesied gracefully.

"Luncheon here will be a buffet affair today, as I shall be engaged with matters of pastry. I'm sure,

"Can I give you a lift?"

however, that you will find employment until dinner time, when my house will be fully in order again."

I intended that this should be a busy day, so without making explanations I went to the stable, told the coachman I wished to be driven to the station and was soon whizzing over the hills toward Katonah.

I wondered how Wiggins and the other gentlemen at the Prescott Arms were faring. My question was partially answered a second later as we passed the road that forked off to the inn. On a stone by the roadside sat Lord Arrowood, desolately guarding a kit bag and a suit case. He was dressed in a shabby Norfolk jacket and knickerbockers and sucked a pipe.

I bade the driver pause and greeted the nobleman affably.

"Can I give you a lift. You seem to be bound for the station, and I'm taking a train myself."

"No, thanks," he replied sharply. "They're a lot of bounders—bounders, I say!"

"Ah! Of whom do you speak, Lord Arrowood?" I asked, glancing at my watch.

"Those scoundrels at the inn. They have thrown me out—thrown me out—me!"

"Hard lines, for a fact, but if you are interested in trains!"

"I refuse to leave the county!" he shouted. "If they think they're going to get rid of me they're mistaken. Bounders, I say, bounders!"

He uttered this opprobrious term with great bitterness and crossed his legs, as though to emphasize his permanence upon the boulder. Patience on a monument is not more eternally planted. He seemed in no mood for conversation, so I sped on, with no time to lose.

I gained the step of the chair car attached to the 10:18 with some loss at which might easily play any manner of other tricks. His disappearance after I had gone down into the house with him was just as mysterious as the ghost."

"It was natural for father not to want you to know how he got in. The motive for that would be the fact that he is not supposed to see me or communicate with me in any way."

"It must have occurred to you that there is one member of the Hollister family we haven't mentioned in this connection."

"If you mean Hezekiah—"

"None other."

"If Hezekiah or my father should be caught in the house while I am there just now we should all pay dearly for it. Believe me, this is true. Some day you may know the ways and wherefores; at present no one may know. But why should Hezekiah wish to prowl about there at night—to assume for a moment that she is doing it?"

Her manner was wholly earnest. It was plain that she had entered into some sort of compact with her aunt, and no doubt the arrangement was in the characteristic whimsical vein of which I had enjoyed personal experience. I did not wish to press Cecilia for explanations she might not be free to make, but I ventured a suggestion or two.

"Hezekiah may be entering the house and playing ghost for amusement, merely in a spirit of childish rebellion against the interdiction that forbids her the house. That is quite plausible. Hezekiah being the spirited young person we know her to be. And it may amuse her, too, to plug the chimneys at a time when her sister is enjoying the visits of suitors. Without quite realizing that such was her animus, she may be the least—the very least bit jealous!"

Cecilia flushed, and her eyes flashed indignantly. She bent toward me eagerly.

"Please do not say such a thing! You must not even think it!"

"She may be a little forlorn, alone in your father's house over the hills at times when you are surrounded by admirers, and it is my assumption from what I have learned in one way and another of your flight abroad last summer that some of these gentlemen now established at the Prescott Arms are known to her."

"Oh, all of them, certainly."

"And Hartley Wiggins among the rest?"

"That, Mr. Ames, is most unkind," she declared earnestly. "She has told me that she was not in the least interested in Mr. Wiggins."

"And she told me the same thing, but I do not feel sure of it. But what if she is? You are not really interested in him yourself?"

She did not vouchsafe any reply to my statement, but changed the subject abruptly. My description of the ghost had taken considerable time, and we were now at the end of our journey.

"I count on finishing my errand and taking the 2:07," she remarked.

"That's a short time to allow yourself. I've heard that it's a dreary business chasing the employment agencies."

"Not if you know where not to go. If you'll get me a machine of some sort I'll be off at once."

"I fear I shan't conclude my own business so soon, but if you will honor me at luncheon—"

"Sorry, Mr. Ames, but it's out of the question. I hope to see you at dinner tonight. And please—"

"Yes, Miss Hollister—"

"Please remember that you are

I had imagined all the suitors established at the Prescott Arms. As the three appeared clad in light automobiling coats I could not forbear a smile at their grim appearance. Shallenberger, the novelist, and Ormsby, the knit goods manufacturer, were big men. Dick, the Nebraska philosopher, was much shorter, though of compact and sturdy build. They growled surlily in response to my greeting, and Ormsby closed the door behind them. Dick seemed to be the designated spokesman, and he advanced to the desk behind which

"Do I correctly understand, sir, that you mean to insult us?"

I sat with a stride and manner that advertised his belligerent frame of mind.

"Mr. Ames," he began, "we have come here to speak for ourselves and certain other gentlemen who are staying for a time at the Prescott Arms."

"Gentlemen of the committee, welcome to our office," I replied, greatly amused by his ferocity.

My tone caused the others to draw in defensively behind him.

"We want you to understand that your conduct in accompanying a lady that I shall not name to the city is an act we cannot pass in silence. Your conduct in going to Hopefield Manor was in itself an affront to us, but your behavior this morning passes all bounds. We have come, sir, to demand an explanation!"

At a glance this was a situation I dare not take seriously.

"Mr. Dick and gentlemen of the committee, you are meddling persons!" I said.

"Meddlesome!" cried Dick heatedly and leaning toward me across my desk. "Do I correctly understand, sir, that you mean to insult us?"

"Nothing could be further from my purpose. But I cannot permit you to imagine that I'm going to allow you to beard me in my office and criticise my conduct in regard to Miss Cecilia Hollister or anybody else. As a philosopher from the fertile corn lands of Nebraska I salute you with

I had gone to the St. Parveto to call upon a Washington lad, had been making life a burden assistant and on coming out Fifth avenue shortly after thought me of the Asolando tea. My interview with the committee the suitors had driven from my practically every consideration every interest not centered in field Manor. My thoughts gratefully to the Asolando, where a few days ago I had been plotted into the strangest adventure my eventless life had known.

A strange face was visible at the cashier's desk as I entered the room. I passed on, finding the quite full, but I took it as a omen that the seventh table for right was unoccupied, and I appropriated it. On the whole, when I had finally torn myself away from my assistant, who made no attempt to conceal his doubts as to my sanity, and had settled myself in the 4:14 express with the afternoon papers I was fully satisfied with the day's adventures. I had told the coachman in the morning not to trouble to meet me on my return, and I engaged the village liveryman to drive me to the house for hire.

"There's a heap o' talk in the village," he observed. "They do say the old lady's cracked, if I may so speak of her, and that there's ghosts in the house. And the conduct of the gentlemen at the Prescott Arms is most remarkable. The word's passed that they're all dippy about the young Miss Hollister that lives with her aunt. I reckon all rich people are a bit cracked. It appears to go with the money. Mr. Bassford Hollister—he's the old lady's brother—he's just as bad as any of 'em. Yesterday he sat in the village street countin' the number of people he saw chewin' gum. Told our doctor in the village he was figurin' the amount of horsepower the American people put into gum chewin' every year and expects to find some way of usin' it to run machinery. It's harmless, Doc. says. He calls it just the Hollister idiosyncrasy, if that's the word. But I reckon it's idiosyncrasy all right. I wish you good luck of your place, sir."

He evidently believed me to be some sort of upper servant, and this added to my joy of the day. With my good humor augmented by the interview I entered the house. A strange footman admitted me, and I went to my room at once without meeting any one else.

The man followed me with a penciled note, signed with Cecilia's initials, requesting my presence below as soon as possible, as she wished to see me before dinner. The thought that she wished to see me at any time filled me with elation, and her few lines, scratched on a correspondence card, were a pleasing addendum to our conversation of the morning. The finding of my assistant's telegraphed resignation on my dressing table, to take effect in January, had not the slightest effect upon my lofty minarets in which my fancy now found lodgment. It pleased me to believe that fighting blood still pulsed in the last of the house of Ames and that I had hurled defiance at the organized band of suitors that guarded the Hopfield gates and picketed the surrounding hills.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Riddle of the Sibyl's Leaves.

My question as to which Cecilia I should find in the library was quickly answered. Her frank smile, the candor of her eyes, confessed a new tie between us. We were becoming conspirators within the main conspiracy, whatever its character might be.

the sibyl's leaves. That and the laying of the ghost are my immediate business. As for the gentlemen at the Prescott, including my old friend Hartley Wiggins, I am not in the least afraid of them. My hand is raised against them. If it's a case of the test of Ulysses over again I'm as likely as any of them to bend the bow."

I thought this well spoken, but she seemed amused, though without unkindness, by the earnestness of my speech.

"If your wit is equal to your valor you may go far. But"—and she turned here eyes full upon me—"we must play the game according to the rules."

"And as for Hartley Wiggins"—

vantage of her youth and susceptible nature."

"His punishment is sure," I answered complacently. "Hezekiah laughed when I mentioned his name. And you frown today at the thought of him."

"Aunt Octavia is coming," she remarked, feigning at once a careless air, but I was content that she let my remark pass unchallenged.

Miss Octavia's entrances were always effective. She appeared tonight charmingly gowned, but the bright twinkle in her eyes made it clear that no matter of dress could effect her humor or spirit. She greeted me, as she always did, as though our acquaintance were a matter of years rather than of days. I even imagined that she seemed pleased to find me back again. She asked no questions as to my day's occupations, but as we went in to dinner sallied forth cheerful upon a description of her own activities.

"After I had baked my required quota of pies this morning I sought recreation at the traps. The stable boy who has been pulling the string for me having struck work, it most providentially happened that I espied Lord Arrowood hanging on the edge of the maple tangle beyond the barn. I summoned him at once and put him to work managing the traps for me, finding him most efficient. He seemed extremely despondent, and after I had satisfied myself that two out of three was not an impossible record for one of my years, I brought him to the house and made tea for him. I left the room for a moment—I had taken him into the kitchen, where, during his incumbency of the regular cook I hardly dare venture myself, and he made himself comfortable quite near the range. The pies on which I had been engaged all morning lay cooling near him. I had composed twenty-nine pies—I am an excellent mathematician and I could not have been mistaken in the count. What was my amazement to find after his lordship's departure that one pie was missing!"

"His lordship was doubtless hungry," I suggested. "Even nobility must eat. I passed Lord Arrowood on the highway early this morning, sitting upon a stone, with sundry items of hand baggage reposing beside him. I have rarely seen any one so depressed. Now that the little matter of the servants has been adjusted, we must have a care lest the newly arrived phalanx, which Providence so kindly sent to you today, is not starved by any further manifestations of the troubled spirit of the unfortunate Briton who was hanged on

My question as to which Cecilia I should find in the library was quick- ly answered. Her frank smile, the candor of her eyes, confessed a new tie between us. We were becoming conspirators within the main con- spiracy, whatever its character might be.

"As to Providence and the cook, what luck?" I asked.

"Oh, I managed that very easily. I ran into some friends who were going abroad for the winter. They have a staff of unusual servants and were anxious to keep them together until their return. I promptly engaged them all, and they are even now installed."

"Well, I have had an adventure of my own," I remarked, after express- ing my relief that she had solved the servant difficulty with so much ease. "Three gentlemen represent- ing the suitors' trust now maintain- ing headquarters at the Prescott Arms, warned me solemnly to keep off the grass. In other words, I am not to interfere with their designs upon the heart of Miss Cecilia Hol- lister."

She flung open a fan, held it at arm's length and scrutinized the daffodils that were traced upon it.

"So they dared you?"

"So they dared me. And I took the dare."

"Why?"

Her eyes met mine gravely, but behind her pretty pout a smile lurked delightfully.

"If I should tell you now it would be flirting, which is a sin."

"I had imagined, Mr. Ames, that sort of thing came easy to you. But if it's sinful, of course—"

"But you do not rule me out! You give me a chance!"

My earnestness caused her manner to change suddenly. Her beautiful gravity came like a swift falling of starlit twilight. I had never been so happy as at this moment. Pre- posterous as were the circumstances of my presence in the house the jux- taposition of Cecilia Hollister gave me unalloyed delight.

"I want to serve you now, hereafter and always," I added. "These men can have no claim upon you greater than that of any other man who dares!"

"No, none whatever," she replied firmly.

"And the mystery, the whole story, is in the little silver book!"

She started, flushed, and then laughter visited her lips and eyes. The book was not in her hands nor in sight anywhere, but I felt that I was on the right track and that the little trinket had to do with her plight and her compact with her aunt. Best of all, the fact that I had chanced upon this clew gave her happiness. There was no debating that.

"You had best have a care, Mr. Ames. You have spoken words that would be treasonable if they came from me, and I must not countenance them."

"But you will tolerate from me words that you would not permit an- other to speak? Do I go too far?"

She bent her head to one side, with the slightest inclination, as of a rose touched by a vagrant wind.

"If I could only half believe in you," she said, "you might really serve me. So these gentlemen warn- you away! Their presumption is

She sat up very straight, and the sudden disdain in her face startled me. I had forgotten my eavesdropp- ing in the clump of raspberries on the day of my arrival. Certainly Wiggins had been decidedly in the race then, and my heart thumped in resentment as I recalled her own message, or compact of encourage- ment, which I had borne to Wiggins at the Prescott Arms.

"I will tell you something, Mr. Ames. This afternoon, as I drove from the station I came round by the lake merely to cool my eyes on the water, and I saw Mr. Wiggins and my sister seated on a wall in an old orchard. They were so busily en- gaged that they did not see me. At least, he did not, but I think Heze- kiah did."

"Hezekiah," I answered, relieved by the nature of her disclosure, which could not but prejudice Wig- gins' case. "Hezekiah is fond of orchards. I dare say this was the same one in which I had a charming talk with her myself. Doubtless she was amusing herself with Wiggins just as she did with me. She finds the genus homo entertaining."

"She is the dearest girl in the world—the sweetest, the loveliest, the brightest. Mr. Wiggins has treated her outrageously. He has taken ad-

ting upon a stone, with sundry items of hand baggage reposing beside him. I have rarely seen any one so de- pressed. Now that the little matter of the servants has been adjusted, we must have a care lest the newly arrived phalanx, which Providence so kindly sent to you today, is not starved by any further manifesta- tions of the troubled spirit of the un- fortunate Briton who was hanged on the site of this house."

"Mr. Ames," replied Miss Octavia impressively, "that matter is entire- ly in your hands."

"But if I could see the plans of this house I should be better able to grapple with his ghostship."

I had thrown this out in the hope of eliciting some remark from her touching the Swedish maid's visit to Pepperton's office, but Miss Octavia met my gaze unflinchingly.

Garrick's Wit.

David Garrick on one occasion pass- ed Tyburn as a huge crowd was as- sembling to witness the execution of a criminal. "Who is he?" asked the great actor of a friend who accompa- nied him.

"I believe his name is Vowel," was the reply.

"Ah," said Garrick, "I wonder which of the vowels he is, for there are sev- eral. At all events it is certain that it is neither U nor I."

To begin with, it is perfect. To the end it remains perfect—the Edison—

Blue Amberol Record

No musical-mechanical triumph has approached this re- markable invention of Edison. The new composition of which it is made catches and holds the natural beauty of tone of the world's greatest singers, orchestras and bands, and holds it after you have played it over 3,000 times.

The Blue Amberol is a per- petual, practically unbreakable record that reproduces in an amazing way the art of the performers. Don't miss the oppor- tunity to hear it played at some

You Get Bilious

Because Your Liver is Lazy

You get a bilious attack when your liver refuses to do its work. The bile does not flow. You become constipated. Food sours instead of digesting. You have that "bitter as gall" taste. The stomach becomes inflamed and inflated—turns sick—vomiting, and violent headache.—The best preventative and cure for biliousness is Chamberlain's Tablets. They make the liver do its work—strengthen the digestive organs, and restore to perfect health. 25c. a bottle—All Dealers and Druggists, or by mail.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

A long whip never made a man a good driver.

A dirty milker is worse than a dirty cook. To wet the hands with the milk when milking is a dirty habit.

If we keep stock enough on our farms to consume our surplus hay, grain and straw, especially the straw, the fertility of our farms will not become exhausted as soon as it otherwise would.

The back yard goat is not likely to put the cow out of business. Nevertheless there is a place for the milk goat.

Nowadays a farmer may sell a pair of mules for enough to buy an automobile, but nine times out of ten he would do better to keep the mules.

Ewes intended for breeders should be carefully looked after when the cool weather starts in.—Farm Journal.

SEALING THE FULL SILO.

Precautions to Observe to Prevent Spoiling of Silage.

There is only one way to avoid all losses of silage on top, and that is to begin feeding at once, says the Kansas Farmer. This oftentimes is not desirable, and it should be the aim to reduce the amount of spoiling on top to a minimum. If possible to so arrange it some thoroughly green, heavy material should be used in filling the top three or four feet of the silo. There is always a tendency for the top to dry out at once in a very dry time. The application of water over the surface for several days after the silo is filled will tend to keep the silage wet on top. The formation of a thin layer of wet, slimy, moldy material forms the seal which effectually prevents the silage from spoiling underneath.

After the silo has been filled and tramped for the last time the surface should not be disturbed by further tramping. This would tend to disturb the layer of moldy material and thus let air get down into the good silage underneath. If the tramping has been properly done the silage will not draw away from the wall. In many cases

The Jersey has the finest bones of any of the dairy breeds. The udder of the best type of Jersey of today is an ideal one, long, extending well up in front, fully rounded, level as can be, with teats placed just right, and it leaves nothing to be desired except in some instances little longer teats. The Jersey is the very embodiment of dairy conformation, and she breeds true to type. The pure bred Jersey bull shown is a typical specimen of the breed.

the tendency has been to neglect tramping and to fill the middle. This results in the center settling much more than the sides, and the silage draws away from the wall, allowing air to pass down the side five or six feet. This always means a great deal of spoiled silage. Joseph E. Wing of Ohio reports the use of half a barrel of salt spread over the surface as giving good results in reducing the amount of waste on top.

When a silo has been practically filled with an early crop or one that must be harvested early in order to save it the same method of sealing the surface should be used. When ready to refill later with Kaffir or other late crops the spoiled material on the surface should be removed. Three or four different crops may be placed in the silo in this manner.

The Profitable Pig.

Pigs that are kept growing every day of their lives produce the weight at less cost than those that are allowed to grow along slowly and then finally fattened for market, says the Orange Judd Farmer. The rapid growing pig produces a better quality of meat that meets the requirements of the present day consumers. The slow growing pig after being fattened for market is simply a rim of lean meat overlaid with fat which has cost heavily to produce. The rapid growing pig produces a large amount of lean meat intermingled with fat, which is produced cheaply in a short period of time. The rapid growing pig attains popular market weights in a shorter time and can be disposed of sooner so as to avoid many risks which may have to be met with the slow growing pigs, both in the possibility of a decline in prices and meeting with diseases.

Examine the Colt's Feet.

Handle all the colt's feet once a month at least. If the feet are not straight you will be surprised what you can do with a rasp. Many heavy draft colts come with crooked hind feet. They walk on the outside of hind feet. You can overcome this and grow these feet perfectly straight. Rasp inside of hoof, from bottom side lower than outside; also rasp edge back and shorter. Keep the foot in this shape, and it will soon grow straight. When currying dam just brush the colt a little and brush mane over to right side as often as possible. This will save a lot of bother later on.

DIRECT TO YOU FREIGHT PREPAID

"The Best is the Cheapest"

WE ARE the wire fence pioneers of Canada. We put wire fence on the market and were the first to make a standardized high-grade reliable fence.

Since that time our enormous list of satisfied customers, greater probably than all other fence companies combined, has been built up by honest fence, honest wire, honest weaving, honest galvanizing. Page galvanizing is special and is the best that can be produced.

OUR customers see Page fence give 15 and 20 years of service. They willingly pay highest prices to get Page fence because they have seen "bargain fences" sag, rust and break long before an honest fence should.

TO-DAY we say buy Page fence for cash, at factory prices. Fence will be shipped quickly, freight paid, to your nearest station. Order from the Page warehouse nearest you, at Walkerville, Toronto, Montreal, or St. John, N.B. Page fence is easiest to get and has a greater choice of styles, and gives better service than any other fence offered in Canada to-day.

PAGE Wire Fence uses specially made steel wire.

This is no empty claim. We actually use it. This wire has a high per-centage of carbon as compared with ordinary hard-drawn wire and is therefore much more tough, springy and strong. It costs more but the Page fence must wear best and it does. Our prices for cash to-day are the biggest value you have ever seen. Only experienced fence men will appreciate how big. Send your order to-day. These lowest cash prices are subject to change without notice. They include freight, according to territory, to your own railroad station. We keep big stocks at Toronto, Montreal and St. John.

"PAGE" FENCE IS A GUARANTEED FENCE

The Page Company is noted for its fair dealing and liberal guarantees. No matter what your experience has been in buying by mail you can trust this Company implicitly. We always have and we always will guarantee every rod of Page fence to be satisfactory and exactly as represented or we will take back the goods, refund your money and in addition pay you for your time and trouble. That's because we're absolutely sure of Page fence. Every trouble point in ordinary fences has been perfected out of the Page—every wire is the same length as the wire next to it, hence, when the fence is stretched, all wires have equal tension—there is no bagging or sagging. The locks absolutely do not injure the wires in the least and are a most secure fastening. The whole fence is a true, taut wall of steel protecting your crops and stock, putting big money in your pocket every year.

BUY AT THESE PRICES NOW. THEY MAY BE RAISED VERY SOON.

Wire of the "Page" quality tends to advance. Buy while we can make these prices on this present contract. It is money in your pocket. ## MABEL'S CHITCHAT

What One Woman Thinks of the Suffrage Question.

EDUCATE, NOT AGITATE.

An Up to Date Interpretation of the Old Adage, "A Soft Answer Turneth Away Wrath"—Simple Household Convenience That Saves Time.

Dear Elsa—Our woman's club had its first meeting of the season yesterday, and the guest of honor was a talker of the wordy but unconvincing sort, one who never gets anywhere except on one's nerves. The lady's subject was suffrage, and when she had finished laying down the law that ought to be my feelings were similar, methinks, to those of Henry Ward Beecher, who when subjected in his own pulpit to a like dissertation rose and in a calm, dispassionate manner said to the tired congregation, "And I still believe that woman should speak in public."

Nasty remark? Yes, it certainly was. But Mr. Beecher's sense of humor, I believe, was often known to upset his manners.

You asked me in your last letter how I stood on the suffrage question. I stand, to use an Irishism, "on the fence." There is a powerful lot of talk going on among women as to whether they want to vote or not. But, do you know, it seems to me that this is hardly the question. I feel that if it is right we shall get it whether we want it or not. The real question as it appears to me is, Are we prepared to vote if we had the opportunity?

It is a tremendous responsibility we women will have to face if we do get the franchise, and if we are to do the good we are expected to do we must know how to handle the weapon if it is put into our hands.

So strong are my convictions on this subject that I have urged the club committee in charge of entertaining to ask a well known lecturer to give us a course in civil government this winter, so that we may be not only prepared for the ballot if it comes, but should also learn something of the principles upon which various governments are founded. So, dear, in a few months I expect to be a very learned lady in civic affairs. Frankly, now, I do not know whether I want to vote or not, but I do think that in the meanwhile it is better to educate than to agitate.

"The bunch," as Dick calls three or four of the girls who trot around together, were having a heart to heart talk over the teacups at our house the other afternoon, and in some way the old, old story of disagreements between husband and wife was touched upon. Louise D. surprised us all by telling her first experience of this kind and how she met it.

"When Ed and I married," she said, "we had an agreement on this point. We knew that there were sure to be times when things would not run smoothly and we'd have disagreements. We had experienced a little friction of this kind during our courtship, so we made this agreement: If

TREASURY RELICS

Historical Treasures on File in the Auditor's Office.

ACCOUNTS OF G. WASHINGTON.

These Cover a Period of Eight Years and Are in the Handwriting of the Great Patriot—Receipts Signed by Daniel Webster and Henry Clay.

The archives of the United States treasury are rich with relics. In the files of the office of the auditor of the treasury department may be seen the canceled check showing the payment to Lafayette in 1824 of $200,000 by the United States "in consideration of his services and sacrifices in the war of the Revolution." William H. Crawford, then secretary of the treasury, signed the warrant, and in the characteristic French handwriting on the reverse is the indorsement of Lafayette. A canceled check or warrant for $15,000,000 represents the payment for the Louisiana purchase under the treaty of 1803.

The purchase under the treaty, characterized at the time as "Seward's folly," of Alaska is evidenced by a warrant for $7,200,000, signed by F. E. Spinner, who at the time was secretary of the treasury. The wording of the warrant begins and runs, "Pay to the undersigned envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of his majesty the emperor of all the Russias." This warrant called for payment in coin and was so paid through the Riggs bank, then a private banking institution of Washington, after being indorsed by Edward de Stoecke, the Russian minister at that time.

The purchase of the Philippine Islands from Spain is represented in the important financial transactions of the government by four warrants of $5,000,000 each. As a treaty cannot be entered into by one country directly with one with which it is at war, the warrants were indorsed by Jules Cambon, the French minister, who had delegated authority to represent the Spanish government.

The Panama canal purchase represented the largest financial transaction of the government. The payment was made by a common draft, payable to "J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., special disbursing agent," through whom it was paid to the French company, the former owner. The late J. Pierpont Morgan himself indorsed the draft. A short time previous there had been issued a warrant for $10,000,000, covering the cost of the canal zone, an area of ten miles on each side of the canal. As these canceled checks are held as receipts, it could happen, in case of their loss, that the government might not be able to show that the moneys were actually paid.

Not less interesting as relics are "Accounts—G. Washington with the United States, commencing June, 1775, and ending June, 1783, comprehending a space of eight years." Under the caption are three or four dilapidated calf bound account books in the handwriting of the great American patriot. These accounts were mostly kept while

AVON, ONT., May 14th, 1913.

"I have used "Fruit-a-lives" for Indigestion and Constipation with most excellent results, and they continue to be my only medicine. I am highly pleased with "Fruit-a-lives" and am not ashamed to have the facts published to the world. When I first started, about six years ago, to use them, I took four for a dose, but I cured myself of the above troubles and gradually reduced the dose to one tablet at night.

Before taking "Fruit-a-lives" I took salts and other pills but the treatment was too harsh. I thought I might as well suffer from the disease as from these treatments.

Finally, I saw "Fruit-a-lives" advertised with a letter in which someone recommended them very highly, so I tried them. The results were more than satisfactory and I have no hesitation in recommending them to any other person. They have done me a world of good. I get satisfaction from them, and that is quite a lot!" ## WOMEN WARRIORS.

One That Was Made a Heroine In Spite of Herself.

There are few countries that have not at one time or another had women soldiers in their ranks—either in disguise or openly accepted despite their sex. England, France and Germany have all had military heroines. Germany, which traditionally demands of its women only softness and domesticity, has nevertheless had its full share. One of them, Eleonore Prochaska, had saved her wages as a cook to buy her man's equipment. In her last battle, when storming some lights under heavy fire, she snatched a drum from a fallen Frenchman and beat the charge as she advanced.

"You can sew, cook, wash, sing and shoot better than any of us," said the comrade at her side admiringly, "and now it seems you can drum too!"

A moment later she was mortally wounded. As she fell she called to the nearest officer, with a dying flash of pride and humor:

"Lieutenant, I'm a girl!"

Another girl, Anna Luhring, only eighteen, was traced and claimed by her father after she had enlisted, but had courageously refused to disclose so that

"When Ed and I married," she said, "we had an agreement on this point. We knew that there were sure to be times when things would not run smoothly and we'd have disagreements. We had experienced a little friction of this kind during our courtship, so we made this agreement: If an argument began or if one spoke sharply to the other about anything, no matter what, the second one was to keep perfectly quiet and not 'answer back.' We both realized that it was not what was originally said that made the trouble, but that it was in the 'answering back,' and then, if this was committed on both sides the result was almost surely to be a serious quarrel.

"Well, we agreed to try this quiet treatment if the expected disagreement came, and, sure enough, it did come. It was over a very trivial affair, and I am sorry to say that I was the aggressor in the first case, although I have not always been the first to start it since. Ed lived right up to his part of the agreement and never said a word, and I felt so ashamed that I could have welcomed a beating. At any rate, that argument stopped just about where it began. I think Ed had the same experience the first time he was the aggressor, and he, too, began to keep a very careful watch upon his tongue. So you see our plan has worked beautifully, not only in helping us to avoid unpleasant discussions, but also from keeping us from beginning them." Not a bad idea, is it? Simply a new way of applying the soft answer adage.

Here's another hint one of the girls of "the bunch" told us about that is worth passing on. It seems that the linen closet in her home is in the hall, and as she could not have a table there she was forced to sort the wash out on the nearest bed and then carry it piece by piece to the closet. This process was both tiresome and not particularly hygienic. Some one asked her why she didn't have a hinged shelf put up. Of course Dorothy never had thought of such a thing in this connection, but the idea germinated into what has been a great convenience in sorting the wash.

A wide, thin board was hinged on to the lowest shelf of the closet, just as a leaf is hinged on to a kitchen table. When this leaf is not in use it goes down flat, but when it is needed for sorting clothes the flap is pulled out, and, with the assistance of a couple of supports underneath, it is made firm for the work in hand. It is one of the very simple contrivances that one so seldom thinks of, but are of such infinite service when found.

I am obliged to stop chattering to you and interview a prospective candidate for culinary honors. Devotedly yours,
MABEL.

Quite Natural.
"Of course," said the tourist, "you know all about the antidotes for snake bite?"
"Certainly," replied the explorer.
"Well, when a snake bites you what's the thing you do?"
"Yell."—Philadelphia Press.

The New Mother.
"When you kissed your weeping mother goodbye and went out into the world to make your fortune I presume her last tearful injunction was for you to be good?"
"No, make good."

counts—G. Washington with the United States, commencing June, 1775, and ending June, 1783, comprehending a space of eight years." Under the caption are three or four dilapidated calf bound account books in the handwriting of the great American patriot. These accounts were mostly kept while he was on the march, but they were brought up with great accuracy from day to day.

At the end of each book there is a comprehensive recapitulation. Individual money and funds of the government expended by him are specifically indicated. In a footnote he calls attention to a particular item which he appeared to have paid, but for which he had no voucher. He deducted the amount of the item from his credit until the matter could be definitely settled. All of his accounts are expressed in English money.

A contemporaneous account book kept by Caleb Gibbs shows the personal expenses of Washington and his military "family," meaning, no doubt, his immediate staff. The entries are usually headed, "Headquarters, on the march." For the most part they cover purchases of food supplies, but now and then are such entries as:

"To cash for a broom that Peter bought some time ago, sixpence."
"Cash paid for mending the chariot. 1 shilling."

"Agreed with Peggy for 4 shillings per month for the general's washing and 4 shillings per dozen for the gentlemen of the family."

Among other things of interest in the auditor's office are books showing allowances to members of congress to and from Washington. In the Thirtieth congress $963 for mileage is receipted in a faint, uncertain hand "D. Webster." A payment of $560 for 111 days' attendance is shown to have been made to Henry Clay. —Harper's Weekly.

Bowling.
Bowls, or bowling, is one of the most popular and ancient of English pastimes, its origin being traceable to the twelfth century. It was held in such disfavor for years that laws were enacted against it, and it was an illegal pursuit. Alleys were built, however, as it could not be played out of doors during the winter, and the game flourished in spite of opposition. In the beginning of the eighteenth century greens began to increase, while the alleys were rigorously and absolutely suppressed. It soon became a royal game, and no gentleman's place was complete without a bowling green. —New York Press.

There is always hope in a man that actually and earnestly works. In idleness alone is there perpetual despair.—Carlyle.

Up to Date Milkman.
"What are you giving your cows now in the way of galactagogues?" asked the Irvington professor of the milkman.
"Oh," said the milkman, who has just been graduated from Purdue and is not to be stumped by any Butler college pedagogue, "their sustenance is wholly of vegetable origin, rich in chlorophyl and opulent in butyrateous qualities."
"A pint, if you please," said the professor.
"Git up," said the milkman.—Indianapolis News.

A moment later she was mortally wounded. As she fell she called to the nearest officer, with a dying flash of pride and humor:

"Lieutenant, I'm a girl!"
Another girl, Anna Lubring, only eighteen, was traced and claimed by her father after she had enlisted, but her captain refused to dismiss so fine a soldier.

A young dressmaker, Sophia Kruger, who made her own uniform before enlisting, won the Iron Cross for bravery.

Maria Weider, a farmer's wife, served, undiscovered, with her husband and was promoted to be a sergeant, although he remained a private.

An amusing contrast to these genuinely gallant women is afforded by Johanna Stegen, who quite by accident won a reputation for heroism. She and a companion, Caroline Berger, were caught by chance in the fighting lines at the battle of Luneberg. Caroline fled to what cover she could find, tore off her apron and began binding the hurts of the wounded who had crawled there also.

Johanna, spying a heap of cartridges, tore off her apron also and began to fill it, for she mistook them for rouleaux of coin. A passing officer supposed naturally she was carrying ammunition to the front and gave her orders where to take it, orders which she dared not disobey. Apronful after apronful of cartridges she carried—and the next day found herself acclaimed a heroine!

Her apron was tied to a staff and borne proudly at the head of the regiment. Men cheered her, the king praised her, and she sat at his right hand at a banquet. Later she married and was lionized by the fashionable ladies of Berlin.—London Tatler.

No Title Page in Early Books.
The idea of a title page did not occur to the early printers. "The books started straight off with 'Incipit' or 'Here beginneth,' without author's or publisher's name. This causes much difficulty in attributing earlier works to the proper sources." The idea of a title page with names seems first to have occurred to a Cologne printer named Therhoernen about 1470, but it was not generally adopted until fifty years later. The early punctuation was very simple, consisting of an oblique line and a full stop. One of the first books to introduce the colon and notes of interrogation and exclamation was a "Lactantius" printed at a monastery near Rome in 1465.—Imprint.

Herbert N. Howard, better known as Thomas, accidentally shot and killed himself on the Main street, Deseronto, about 9 o'clock Monday night. He had been in the Standard bank a few moments before, and had just left the bank when he met two young men with whom he stopped to converse. He drew a loaded revolver from his pocket and while in the act of replacing it, the weapon discharged, the shot entering his right temple. Medical help was at once summoned, but death came a few moments after the arrival of the doctor. A pathetic scene occurred when the young man's father, Mr. Herbert Howard, accountant of the bank of Montreal, hearing the shot, came up to the place of the tragedy, only to find the victim his eldest son. The deceased, who was twenty years of age, was a highly respected citizen, and occupied the position as ledgerkeeper in the Bank of Montreal. Only on Monday he had been notified of a raise in his salary. The body was removed to Allum's undertaking rooms, and Coroner Passmore called an inquest on Tuesday. The jury after two sittings brought in a verdict of accidental death. The funeral was held on Wednesday in the English church at 10 o'clock, after which the body was taken on the 11.20 train to Kingston, where interment took place. He leaves to mourn his loss, his father, two brothers and two sisters, his mother having died several years ago.
